The problem before the project

Vulnerable communities can face connected difficulties: interrupted schooling, illness or disability in a household, insecure income, and limited routes from talent to work. When services are scattered, families may be left to navigate support alone.

Project CanSinga Plus explains Norisha's intended response: understand needs responsibly, connect qualified partners and make support accountable. Education, health, family protection, talent and livelihoods form a coordinated support journey close to where people live.

The proposed BraveLand City is one component of a wider programme that includes regional hubs, local and mobile support, and digital coordination. These are concepts in development.

Canaan + Singapore + Plus

Canaan recalls Raila Amolo Odinga's public metaphor; Singapore recalls President William Samoei Ruto's development comparisons. Plus expresses the Founder's ambition to go beyond both ideas. The name does not imply political endorsement.

"A name can hold a destination before a programme has worked out its route."
